

How to withdraw an article without violating scientific ethics

The biggest reason for withdrawal of an article is incorrectness of the data indicated in it.

It is necessary to send an official request for the name of the editor-in-chief and attach a document with the signatures of co-authors, who confirm their consent to withdraw the article.

It is considered unacceptable to withdraw an article, which has already been accepted for publication, if it was accepted by one more journal (for example, the one with a higher rating).

If the article is in the process of reviewing, it is highly undesirable to withdraw it unless the author has very important reasons for this.